

Co-operative Party

Scottish Local Government Consultation Questions Policy Process 2026

Introduction

Our policy platform sets the agenda for our party and its representatives at every level of government. Reflecting co-operative values and principles, our policy process is member-led and this is your opportunity to have your say on our future policy objectives.

This year, the policy consultation will focus on expanding our policy offering for co-operative councils and councillors. The Co-operative Party has recently reached historic highs and currently boasts over 1,400 councillors across the UK, which is approximately a quarter of elected Labour councillors. This provides the opportunity to put co-operative values, principles and policies into action in communities across the country. Labour and Co-operative councillors have helped to pioneer community energy development, support the creation of new co-operatives, take action against modern slavery and undertaken many more actions to benefit their residents. This consultation will seek to learn from councillors and members on how we can take this local government work forward – so that co-operation can benefit every community. Whether you're a sitting councillor, a council candidate or a party member we want to hear from you.

Local authorities in the devolved nations of Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland have partially different powers and structure, so please do tailor your submission to your national setting. There are specific questions for each of the devolved nations below.

The consultation will also review our policies for Metro Mayors and combined authorities. The Co-operative Party currently has 7 Metro Mayors – representing many of the biggest urban areas in England – including Greater Manchester, West Yorkshire, and the West Midlands. Following the changes introduced by the English Devolution & Community Empowerment Bill, Metro Mayors will receive additional powers over skills and training, transport, housing and more. This means Metro Mayors will be more important than ever to delivering co-operative policies and solutions across the nation. We want to hear from you on how empowered Metro Mayors and Combined Authorities can make a real difference to building co-operation.

Members are invited to share their views and ideas through our consultation, running until Friday 31st July.
